Weather

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Rain showers are moving into the Bay Area this morning and will continue spreading across Northern California today and tonight. Snow levels will be 7000-8000 feet. Showers and areas of steady continuous rain will continue through Monday, with snow levels above 6000 feet. After a brief break Monday night and early Tuesday, a much stronger Pacific low will be dropping south out of the Gulf of Alaska and into Northern California late Tuesday. This low will produce rain and rain showers through the end of the week and possibly beyond, with snow levels around 5000 feet. Rainfall totals over the 7-day period will be 1-3 inches in the mountains and 0.50-1.50 inches at lower elevations.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A batch of moisture will continue to lift northward across Southern California today. Early this morning, most of the moisture is located over Southern California which has resulted in a few light showers. These showers are expected to be most numerous over the Sierras this afternoon where a tenth to a quarter of an inch of rain will fall. One or two thunderstorms will also be possible. The rest of the area will see mostly cloudy skies with temperatures running 5-10 degrees below normal. The main band of rain will likely move through early today. Rainfall will gradually taper off shortly after daybreak today. Precipitation totals from this second round of rain will range from 0.50" – 1.50" of rain over Southern California with the heaviest rainfall occurring on south facing aspects. The central part of the state will see around a half inch of rain near the higher terrain. Monday, a weak low may provide another quarter of an inch of rain along with gusty west winds in the deserts. Tuesday and Wednesday look dry and warmer as a weak ridge builds over the area. Long range models indicate another system may impact the region next Thursday. No offshore winds are expected the next 7-10 days.
